Fellow Montanans:

The Montana Domestic Violence Fatality Review Commission brings forward its third biennial report. Created by the Montana legislature in 2003, the Commission reviews two domestic violence homicides each year across the state. This report is the summary of our work since January 2007.

There have been at least 22 domestic violence deaths in Montana during this period. Victims of family violence ranged from a 12-year-old boy to two 50-year-old adults. Unfortunately, intimate partner homicide is not diminishing in our state; the number of deaths this biennium is 59 percent higher than last.

Since its inception, the Commission has worked to expand and broaden its understanding of domestic violence homicide. During the past two years deaths involving military personnel, reservation-based Native Americans, a male victim and a workplace killing were all reviewed for the first time. These deaths required interaction with a number of partners, including the federal government and the tribes, creating valuable new relationships. Montana is fortunate to have professionals at every level, in every agency, actively working to understand and reduce domestic violence deaths.

Attorney General Mike McGrath created the Commission and has been a crucial supporter of our work. We are grateful for his guidance and wish him well as Montana's new Chief Justice. The Commission looks forward to working with Attorney General Steve Bullock and members of the 2009 Legislature. Our collective need to stay focused on keeping domestic violence victims safe has not diminished.

Sincerely,

Matthew Dale, Coordinator
Montana Domestic Violence Fatality Review Commission

Report to the 2009 Legislature

The 2003 Montana legislature created the Montana Domestic Violence Fatality Review Commission. During the last two sessions, majorities in both houses extended the Commission's work. Among other things, the legislation mandates this biennial report from the Commission to the legislature, the attorney general, the governor and the chief justice of the Montana Supreme Court, outlining its findings and recommendations.

It should be noted that the Commission reviews only a fraction of the family violence deaths in Montana each year. The group uses its limited time and resources to review only intimate partner homicides. Other groups, such as Montana's Fetal Infant Child Mortality Review teams, gather information on other types of familial deaths. In fact, the adult and child fatality review teams began working together for the first time this year. Unfortunately, there are more deaths than the Commission can review each year. Since the passage of House Bill 116 in 2003, at least 64 Montanans have died in domestic violence homicides. From 2000 forward, our state has averaged more than eight family violence deaths per year, which should be considered a minimum figure.

The Commission is guided by a "no blame/no shame" philosophy. The purpose of a fatality review is not to identify an individual or agency as responsible for the deaths. These are complex cases, involving a number of individuals and variables. It is simply not true that the tragedy was the result of any one action - or inaction - in and of itself.

At the same time, none of the individuals involved with these families would consider the deaths an acceptable conclusion. Domestic violence homicides traumatize not only those close to the family but, indeed, entire communities. By reviewing the murders, the Commission seeks to identify gaps and inadequacies in the response to domestic violence, at the community and statewide levels. The goal is to prevent future family violence deaths. The attachments to this report are specific, concrete steps in that direction.

The first domestic violence death of this biennium took place less than an hour into 2007. Eight more deaths occurred before the year ended. The next year, 2008, proved to be an even deadlier year, with 12 adults and one child being killed between February and November. Geographically, the deaths spanned the state, from Libby to Miles City, Havre to Ashland. This biennium was among the most deadly since the Commission began its work. Calendar year 2008 had more intimate partner homicides than any year since record keeping began in 2000.

During the past two years the Commission reviewed four intimate partner homicides. Three of those were single murders and one was a homicide/suicide. Three of the perpetrators were male. The weapon used differed in each death and included a motor vehicle, a firearm, strangulation and a fall from a porch. The age of the victims ranged from 22 to 45. The homicide/suicide left three children orphaned. Two of the perpetrators were imprisoned and members of the Commission interviewed them as part of those reviews.

One of the reviews involved a Native American victim and the death took place in a reservation community. In choosing this case, the Commission was following up on one of its recommendations in the 2007 Report to the Legislature, to improve our understanding of reservation-based domestic violence homicides. Eight such deaths occurred in the current biennium. That total surpasses Native American deaths in all previous biennia put together.

Tables and charts in the appendix illustrate Native American overrepresentation in all domestic violence homicide incidents and deaths in Montana. According to 2006 census data, Native Americans make up 6.4 percent of the state's population. However, Native intimate partner deaths comprise 13 percent of the total number of victims. Fortunately, the federal government appears to be devoting increased energy and funding in this area. North Dakota Senator Byron Dorgan, for instance, introduced the Tribal Law and Order Act of 2008 last year and plans to do so again early in the next session. This act would significantly increase the power and breadth of tribal courts.

Acting on concerns that Native American deaths were receiving inadequate follow-up from his office, Montana U.S. Attorney Bill Mercer created and disseminated the Indian Country Federal Crime Case Tracker. Professionals across the state received the form and an accompanying memo from Mr. Mercer in October 2008. All those working with Native American victims of crime are encouraged to use it. A copy of the form is included in the appendix.

Other federal resources were identified through the Commission's review of a homicide that involved military personnel. Alcohol was a contributing factor in this killing and the team learned a great deal about U.S. Department of Defense efforts to reduce alcohol abuse on bases and surrounding communities through the "0013" program. The title refers to zero drinks if you are under 21, zero DUI's, one drink per hour and a maximum of three drinks. Malmstrom Air Force base and the City of Great Falls are currently implementing the program in Montana. More information can be found at www.usa0013.com.

There is other positive news to report in Montana's efforts to protect victims and hold batterers accountable.

- Judges are using creative means to hold those convicted of Partner and Family Member Assault (PFMA) accountable to complete the requirements of their sentence. Great Falls city court judge Nancy Luth, for instance, holds monthly status hearings which require the offender to appear in person to explain his or her progress.
- Legislation passed in 2005 allowed automatic "no contact" orders at the time of arrest for PFMA. The appendix includes a sample order and fact sheet explaining details of the law.

- One hundred fifty two city or justice courts (where most PFMA cases are heard) have implemented FullCourt, an electronic case management system that standardizes court practices and helps hold batterers accountable.
- Each of those courts sends information daily into Montana's new Court Repository where it is stored and shared. The Repository greatly improves the state's ability to track offenders across jurisdictions.
- The Commission was broadened and strengthened through the addition of a Department of Justice Division of Criminal Investigation law enforcement officer.
- The long-awaited Hope Card, an aid to those with permanent Orders of Protection, is expected to be available in February 2009.
- Discussions have begun to allow Montana's Child Sexual Abuse Response Team program (MCSART) to be available to children who lose one or both parents due to domestic violence homicide. Through a variety of professionals, MCSART provides support to traumatized children and their non-offending caregivers.

Equally important, Commission members continued making contact with their peers across the state, reducing suspicion about the review process and encouraging implementation of Commission recommendations. Having judges speak with other judges, victim advocates talk with their colleagues, law enforcement converse among themselves, etc., has been essential to the Commission's success.

Montana's Commission is committed to making the reviews as well-rounded as possible. In addition to professionals and service providers, surviving family members are invited to participate in the review process. Commission members interview parents, siblings, children and former spouses of both the victim and the offender prior to the review. When possible, interviews also take place with friends, neighbors, coworkers, ministers and others who knew the family well. Their memories and descriptions broaden and deepen the review process tremendously.

Montana's Fatality Review Commission is alone in the nation in going to this extent to include input from family and community members. The Commission's model is used to train fatality review teams across the country and has been written up in the National Domestic Violence Fatality Review Initiative's Fatality Review Bulletin. Commission members are dedicated to reviews being more than a statistical exercise. The realization that each victim is unique and had a life outside of the tragedy is integral to the work.

The goal of domestic violence fatality reviews is to identify gaps in current systems and propose solutions that will result in fewer lives lost. Montana's Commission has begun that process. By working with community partners and statewide organizations some success has been achieved. It is essential that this work continue. With ongoing support we, along with thousands of other Montanans, will continue our efforts to reduce family violence in our state.

Trends identified by the Commission:

- The number of female perpetrators has increased notably in the past two years.
- There is a significant interaction between alcohol and domestic violence in the majority of the cases reviewed.
- Firearms continue to be the most frequently used weapons.
- Services for domestic violence victims on Native American reservations are frequently nonexistent or inaccessible to many residents.
- Isolation is a major challenge in our state, both for victims of domestic violence and families that require services after a homicide.
- Mental health follow-up services for the children of domestic violence homicide victims appear to be limited and inadequate.
- Ongoing dialogue between tribal, federal and state prosecution teams is required in order to limit jurisdictional conflicts.
- Inconsistent communication between district courts and lower courts regarding Orders of Protection may put victims at risk.

Commission recommendations include:

- Expand use of the Department of Defense's 0013 program to additional communities across the state.
- Require mandatory fingerprinting for all "stackable" misdemeanor offenses, including domestic violence.
- Increase the scope of the MCSART program to include children who lose one or both parents in a domestic violence homicide.
- Help tribal courts get resources to acquire technology to track prior offenses and to exchange electronic records across departments. If desired, this same technology can then be used to share records with other tribes and/or the state CJIN system.
- Improve/increase supervision of those convicted of PFMA through regular contact with the sentencing judge. A model program for status hearings exists in Judge Nancy Luth's court in Great Falls.
- Encourage law enforcement to note and take appropriate action when a firearm is used or threatened in a domestic violence episode.
- Create and implement a domestic/dating violence education program in schools.
- Increase training on the importance of tracking the Order of Protection process from lower courts to district courts.
- Expand use of the Hope Card across the state and across all reservations.
- Remove the Commission's temporary designation and make the enabling statute permanent.

MONTANA DOMESTIC VIOLENCE FATALITY REVIEW COMMISSION

Mission

The Montana Domestic Violence Fatality Review Commission (MDVFRC) is a multi-disciplinary group of experts who study domestic violence homicides in a positive, independent, confidential and culturally sensitive manner, and make recommendations – without blame – for systems and societal change.

Vision Statements

Because we are committed to partner and family safety, the MDVFRC, in partnership with the local community, will achieve:

1. Systemic change: Domestic violence interventions occur early, often and successfully. Individuals communicate openly and effectively across boundaries.
2. Societal change: Communities are educated about and understand why domestic violence occurs and become involved in its reduction.

Guiding Principles

1. We offer each other support and compassion.
2. We conduct the review in a positive manner with sensitivity and compassion.
3. We acknowledge, respect and learn from the expertise and wisdom of all who participate in the Review.
4. We work in honor of the victim and the victim's family.
5. We are committed to confidentiality.
6. We avoid accusations or faultfinding.
7. We operate in a professional manner.
8. We share responsibilities and the workload.

Please direct questions, comments or suggestions about this report or the MDVFRC to Matthew Dale, 406-444-1907 or madale@mt.gov. Additional information (and downloadable versions of the attached forms) is available at <http://www.doj.mt.gov/victims/default.asp>.

MDVFRC REVIEW TIMELINE

The Commission selects the review community based on a number of factors. In general, homicides that are more recent, have unique circumstances and are located in communities not previously visited are preferred.

The attorney general approves the review site.

The process of gathering information begins. Law enforcement, victim services, the courts, medical examiner, etc. are contacted. As appropriate, individuals within those systems are interviewed regarding their experience with victim or offender. Records and interview notes are sent to the team coordinator. Individuals interviewed are invited to attend a portion of the review.

Family members, close friends, coworkers, ministers, teachers, etc., are interviewed. Interview notes are passed on to the team coordinator.

The Commission coordinator sends all accumulated information to members.

Day one of the review process: a timeline is constructed identifying key events in the lives of the victim and perpetrator and their contacts with a variety of professionals/services over time (5 hours).

Day two: community members who have been involved in the accumulation of information for the review (excepting family members) join the Commission to evaluate the timeline and provide any additional information they might have. Those attending the review read and sign a confidentiality agreement. Additions and corrections are made to the timeline (3½ hours). Following a break for lunch, the Commission discusses trends and recommendations learned from this review. Tentative dates and locations for the next review are identified (2 hours).

The Commission coordinator retrieves all written information at the end of the review and transports it back to Helena to be shredded. Members leave the site empty handed.

A summary of the review is transcribed by the facilitator and circulated to Commission members. This document is the only written record of the review. It is not made public.

40-15-301. Jurisdiction and venue. (1) District courts, justices' courts, municipal courts, and city courts have concurrent jurisdiction to hear and issue orders under 40-15-201.

(2) When a dissolution of marriage or parenting action involving the parties is pending in district court, a person may file a petition for an order of protection in a justice's, municipal, or city court only if the district court judge assigned to that case is unavailable or if the petitioner, to escape further abuse, left the county where the abuse occurred. The petitioner shall provide a copy of relevant district court documents to the justice's, municipal, or city court, along with the petition. The justice of the peace, municipal court judge, or city court judge shall immediately certify the pleadings to the original district court after signing an order of protection under this subsection. The district court shall conduct the hearing unless both parties and both courts agree that the hearing may be conducted in the court of limited jurisdiction. If the district court is unable to conduct a hearing within 20 days of receipt of the certified pleadings, it shall conduct a hearing within 45 days of the receipt of the pleadings, unless the hearing is continued at the request of either party for good cause or by the court. If the hearing is continued, the order of protection must remain in effect until the court conducts the hearing.

(3) If one of the parties to an order of protection files for dissolution of marriage or files a parenting action after the order of protection is filed but before the hearing is conducted, the hearing must be conducted in the court in which the order of protection was filed. Either party may appeal or remove the matter to the district court prior to or after the hearing. If the district court is unable to conduct a hearing within 20 days of receipt of the certified pleadings, the district court shall conduct a hearing within 45 days of receipt of the pleadings. The hearing may be continued at the request of either party for good cause or by the court. If the hearing is continued, the order of protection must remain in effect until the court conducts the hearing.

(4) An action brought under this chapter may be filed in the county where the petitioner currently or temporarily resides, the county where the respondent resides, or the county where the abuse occurred. There is no minimum length of residency required to file a petition under this chapter.

(5) The right to petition for relief may not be denied because the petitioner has vacated the residence or household to avoid abuse.

(6) An order of protection issued under this section is effective throughout the state. Courts and law enforcement officials shall give full faith and credit to all orders of protection issued within the state.

(7) A certified copy of an order of protection from another state, along with proof of service, may be filed in a Montana court with jurisdiction over orders of protection in the county where the petitioner resides. If properly filed in Montana, an order of protection issued in another state must be enforced in the same manner as an order of protection issued in Montana.

FACT SHEET

No Contact Orders

What is a No Contact Order?

A No Contact Order (Montana Code Annotated Section 45-5-209) tells a person charged with the offense of partner/family member assault that s/he cannot have contact with any victims of the crime. The purpose of the No Contact Order is to discourage the defendant from contacting the victim after the defendant is arrested/charged.

What kind of contact can a No Contact Order prevent?

A No Contact Order can prohibit any of the following kinds of contact:

- in person (by disallowing the offender from coming near the victim, up to 1,500 feet)
- by a 3rd party
- by telephone
- by electronic communication
- in writing

Each contact or attempt to make contact with each protected person, directly or indirectly, is a separate offense. Consent of the protected person to prohibited contact is not a defense. A protected person may not be charged with a violation of this offense.

How long does a No Contact Order last?

A No Contact Order lasts for 72 hours or until the offender makes a first appearance in court.

How is a No Contact Order put into place?

- A judge can put a No Contact Order in to place when a person who commits the offense of partner/family member assault is charged, or at any court appearance of that person (including sentencing).
- The appropriate judge in each community also has the authority to issue “Standing No Contact Orders”.
 - A “Standing No Contact Order” means that ANY person charged with partner/family member assault will be informed by law enforcement both orally and in writing that there is an automatic No Contact Order placed against him/her.
 - Law enforcement will tell the offender about the No Contact Order and give him/her a copy of the written order at the time of their arrest. A copy is also filed with the court. The victim usually is not given a copy unless s/he goes to the court to request a copy.
 - Advocates should contact their local courts to ask if the judges have issued “Standing No Contact Orders”. Advocates can also work to educate the local police about the use of the orders

Is a No Contact Order different than an Order of Protection?

Yes. The following table shows how the two orders are different.

No Contact Order	Order of Protection
Allowed in the criminal law system, which involves the handling of all partner/family member assault crimes. In the criminal law system, prosecutors represent the State of Montana, which is the Plaintiff. The other person who is charged with the crime is the Defendant.	Allowed in the civil law system, which involves people bringing claims against other people. In the civil law system, the person bringing the claim is the Petitioner and the other person is the Respondent.

If there is a No Contact Order in place against an offender, should a victim also try to get an Order of Protection?

Yes. There are several reasons why it is a good idea for a victim to petition for an Order of Protection even if there is a No Contact Order in place. The reasons include:

- It may be easier for law enforcement officers to tell whether there is an Order of Protection currently in place than if there is a No Contact Order currently in place. Therefore, it is more likely law enforcement officers can and will enforce an Order of Protection.
- A No Contact Order will usually end when the criminal case against the offender is resolved. An Order of Protection can be put into place at any time and can help protect the victim even after a criminal case is over.
- A victim can ask for certain things (support money, mandatory counseling for the offender, etc) through an Order of Protection that are not possible through a No Contact Order.

Hope Cards (available February 2009)

The Hope Card allows someone who has been granted an order of protection in one jurisdiction to easily prove it in another jurisdiction.

The Hope Card lets law enforcement know that there is a valid, permanent order of protection in place. In case of a potential violation of an order, a law enforcement officer can refer to the Hope Card for more information.

- A Hope Card is not a substitute for an order of protection.
- The card includes relevant information related to a valid permanent order of protection.
- It is small and durable, and can be easily carried in a wallet, pocket or purse.
- Hope Cards are not issued for temporary orders of protection.

In Montana, Hope Cards will be issued by the Crow Tribal Court, the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribal Court and the state of Montana. While the cards differ slightly, they must be recognized by law enforcement officers throughout the state.

Features

The Hope Cards issued by the state of Montana will contain information about the protected person and the order:

- the protected person's name, birth date, sex, race and height
- the case number listed on the permanent order of protection, the issuing court and county, the date it was issued and any expiration date

The card provides information about the person named in the order, and any children or other individuals who are also protected under the order:

- the respondent's photo, name, birth date, sex, race, eye and hair color, height, weight and any distinguishing features like scars or tattoos
- the names and birth dates of any children or other individuals who are also protected under the order

How to Request a Hope Card

Hope Cards will be available to anyone with a valid, permanent order of protection. Cards will also be available for any children or other individuals covered by the order. You may request more than one card per individual if, for example, you wish to provide one to a child's school and another to the child's after-school care program.

Hope Cards are not issued based on temporary orders of protection.

In 2008, the U.S. Attorney's Office and the Indian Law Clinic began on-going discussions regarding the creation of a mechanism to ensure that matters which appear to you to constitute federal crimes are identified by individuals in tribal departments and programs in regular disclosures to the U.S. Attorney, whether or not you believe the FBI or BIA is already investigating the matter.

In its work, the Indian Law Clinic hears from tribal members and tribal government personnel regarding their views about perceived inattention to matters which merit federal investigation and prosecution. In the course of your work, you may become aware of matters which should be referred to investigative agencies and the U.S. Attorney's Office for investigation and possible federal prosecution. With respect to Indian Country crimes, it is fairly rare that the U.S. Attorney's Office becomes aware of investigations or potential investigations unless an investigative agency forwards a report to the U.S. Attorney seeking a prosecution or a report which explains why a prosecution should not be undertaken.

After discussions with the Indian Law Clinic, we concluded that there would be value in creating a monthly reporting mechanism from Tribes directly to the U.S. Attorney to ensure all potential federal crimes, particularly violent crimes, are known to the U.S. Attorney's Office for follow-up and tracking with the appropriate investigative agencies. This type of information will enhance accountability for federal law enforcement efforts within Indian Country and will be invaluable in interactions between the U.S. Attorney's Office and federal investigators. AS SHOULD BE EVIDENT, THIS IS NOT A SUBSTITUTE FOR REGULAR AND TIMELY REPORTING OF CRIMES TO TRIBAL POLICE, BIA AND THE FBI. THIS NEW PROCESS IS DESIGNED TO FACILITATE THE INTERAGENCY TRACKING OF CRIMINAL MATTERS.

Attached is a copy of the tracking form developed to facilitate this communication. If you wish to submit this information to the U.S. Attorney electronically, please call or e-mail Sally Frank (sally.frank@usdoj.gov or (406) 247-4638) and she will email the report template to you. You may instead fax the form to the U.S. Attorney's Office at (406) 657-6055 or mail it to the address listed above.

We have attached a summary of the federal offenses and the elements necessary to prove each of the crimes if they (1) occur in Indian Country and (2) an Indian person is the perpetrator and/or the victim. Even if you have extensive experience in this area, I urge you to review the document because Congress has created a number of new crimes applicable to Indian Country in two recently adopted laws, the Adam Walsh Act and the reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act.

With twenty-four Assistant U.S. Attorneys, you should also assume that the U.S. Attorney's Office in Montana is committed to the prosecution of viable cases for most of the statutes listed in the summary, including all cases under the Major Crimes Act.

It is our belief that submission of this form by the appropriate tribal departments and programs on a regular basis will help to ensure that all potential federal crimes in Indian Country are investigated in a timely fashion and referred for prosecution where the investigation yields adequate evidence to prove the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. If you believe other individuals should be invited to participate in this reporting process, please let either one of us know.

Submit monthly by mail to the Office of the U.S. Attorney, District of Montana, P.O. Box 1478, Billings, Montana 59103, or by fax ((406) 657-6055), or by e-mail (bill.mercer@usdoj.gov).
