

CASINO NIGHT GUIDELINES

A casino night provides an opportunity for nonprofit organizations (nonprofits only) to offer limited gambling activities for fundraising purposes. Casino nights are unique in the fact that no real money can be used to play any of the four authorized gambling activities (poker, bingo, keno, and raffles).

HOW DOES A CASINO NIGHT OPERATE?

Imagine a casino night location with one main entrance. At that doorway, attendees pay an entry fee (pre-set by the nonprofit) with cash, check, or a debit card, NO CREDIT CARDS. After paying the entry fee, the nonprofit gives participants “imitation money” such as play money found in board games, chips, tokens, etc., with each having an assigned value greater than the real money paid for the entry fee.

After receiving the imitation money, participants enter the casino night room and use their play money (no real money) to enjoy the gambling activities. The nonprofit is required to assign how much imitation money it will cost to play each of the offered gambling activities.

If a participant runs out of imitation money inside the casino night, they can go back to the entrance door and pay another entry fee to receive more imitation money. Winners in each game can receive prizes such as cash, merchandise, or more imitation money. The nonprofit must establish rules for the casino night and submit them with their permit application.

For example:

In exchange for a $20 USD entry fee, the nonprofit provides the participant with 20 slips of imitation money totaling $200 (each slip has been assigned a value of $10).

Once inside the event, the participant pays the required amount of imitation money to the person running each gambling activity in order to participate (i.e. $10 in imitation money for each bingo game, $10 in imitation money for each keno game, $20 in imitation money for each raffle ticket, and $50 in imitation money for each poker game and so on).

During the night, the participant plays 3 games of poker and 5 games of bingo with their $200 in imitation money and wins $100 in additional imitation money. The participant uses their winnings to buy 5 raffle tickets and wins a TV in the raffle drawing.
